DETAILED ACTION

1. This is in response to the Amendment filed on 3/21/2005. Claims 1-15 and new claims 16-18 are presented for examination.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hanson et al., US pat. No.6,549,957 in view of Nielsen et al., US pat. No.5,870,548. As to claim 1, Hanson discloses a method for an email server (message processing system 15 fig.1) to reduce the unintended duplication of messages forwarded to an email recipient, comprising:

forming a first composite message comprising a first email message and computing and storing a first representative value for said first composite message (see abstract, figs.1, 2, col.7 lines 3-58).

forming, after said first composite message, a second composite message comprising a second email message and computing a second representative value (using data structure including hashblock data) for said second composite message (setting up an email system to monitor the email communication, see fig.9, col.7 line 59 to col.8 line 31 and col.10 lines 19-54).

comparing said first and second representative values (checking for any recognized signature in the master signature database) and forwarding said second email message to an email recipient only if said first and second representative values do not indicate duplication (see fig.6, col.8 line 32 to col.9 line 22).

discarding at least one stored representative value based on at least one predetermined criterion (see col.9 line 23 to col.10 line 54 and col.13 lines 8-53).

Hanson does not specifically disclose an email server does not receive a confirmation from a client in response to a receipt message sent by the email server. However, Nielsen discloses receive a confirmation from a client in response to a receipt message sent by the email server (the recipient's email system returning a confirmation message to the email server, see fig.10A, col.14 line 22 to col.15 line 39 and col.16 lines 26-60). It would have been obvious to one of the ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to implement Nielsen's teachings into the email system of Hanson to process email messages because it would have provided enhanced facilities to users of electronic email in a communications network.

As to claims 2 and 3, Hanson discloses said first and second representative values are hash values and said first composite message is formed prior to receiving said second email message (see col.10 line 21 to col.11 line 44).

As to claims 4 and 5, Hanson discloses the at least one stored representative value is discarded in a predetermined time after it is created col.13 lines 8-57 and col.14 lines 12-63) and the at least one stored representative value is discarded when the list of stored representative values grows to a predetermined size (see col.15 line 31 to col.16 line 9).

Claims 6-10 are rejected for the same reasons set forth in claims 1-5 respectively.

Claims 11-15 are rejected for the same reasons set forth in claims 1-5 respectively.

As to claims 16-18, Nielsen further discloses a receipt message representing an acknowledgement for the client that the email server received the message in full (see col.14 line 22 to col.15 line 15 and col.17 lines 24-58). It would have been obvious to one of the ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to implement Nielsen's teachings into the email system of Hanson to process email messages because it would have provided enhanced facilities to users of electronic email in a communications network.

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-18 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

6. Claims 1-18 are rejected.
